Lisburn & Castlereagh

WELCOME

Welcome to the charming and picturesque village of Hillsborough, where you can discover many unspoilt secrets and immerse yourself in its unrivalled history.

Located south of Lisburn, just off the main Belfast to Dublin Road, lies this beautiful 18th century gem.

In 1573, Sir Moyses Hill, an officer in the army of Queen Elizabeth I, arrived in Ireland. In 1611, he gained possession of the village of Cromlyn or as it was sometimes known 'The Crooked Glen'. It later became known as 'Hillsborough', the centre of influence in a vast estate, a place of elegance and culture, and a scene of architectural beauty, now very much a part of our national heritage.

The village takes its name from Colonel Arthur Hill who completed the building of Hillsborough Fort in 1650. Wills Hill was made Viscount Kilwarlin and Earl of Hillsborough in 1751 and subsequently became the First Marquis of Downshire in 1789. The family had a huge impact on the village and today Hillsborough has a number of beautiful Georgian buildings dating from the 18th century.

THE BIRTHPLACE OF AMERICA

In October 1771, Benjamin Franklin spent five days in Hillsborough as the guest of Wills Hill who had taken up the position as Secretary of State for the colonies.

THE COURTHOUSE & THE SQUARE

The Courthouse, located in The Square at the top of Main Street, was formerly a market house and was built in two phases; the first in about 1760 and the second in 1810.

Lisburn & Castlereagh City Council's award-winning Visitor Information Centre is located in the building. It is an excellent starting place to explore the unique history and heritage of Hillsborough and offers free information together with an excellent range of maps, guides, gifts and crafts.

The buildings in The Square are a perfect example of early to mid-Georgian architecture. The terrace on the north side of The Square was built in 1779. In the last century Lord Arthur Hill had a desire to name many of the more important houses in The Square after his Downshire ancestors – Hill House, Blundell House and Trevor House.

THE DOWNSHIRE MONUMENT

The Downshire Monument can be seen when travelling from Hillsborough to Dromara village. A testimonial to the Third Marquis, this tall and imposing fluted Doric column of dressed stone has a square base on a podium of three tall, raked steps. The Downshire Coat of Arms is inset in its base.

Arthur Blundell Sandys Trumbull Hill, Third Marquis of Downshire (1788 - 1845), died while visiting his estate in Blessington, County Wicklow. His funeral procession was said to have been the longest seen in Ireland.

HILLSBOROUGH CASTLE & GARDENS

Hillsborough Castle was built in the 1770s by Wills Hill, First Marquis of Downshire and later remodelled in the 19th and 20th centuries. It is said to be one of the most beautiful and interesting historic properties in Northern Ireland.

Experience the fascinating story of Hillsborough Castle and chart its journey from family home to political stage; it is the only royal residence in Ireland. Queen Elizabeth The Queen Mother, Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret holidayed in Hillsborough in the 1940s during the Governorship of Lord and Lady Granville, the Queen Mother's sister and brother-in-law. A keen gardener, Lady Granville's legacy lives on in the Granville Rose Garden that contains arguably Europe's largest rhododendron.

The 100 acres of beautiful gardens, developed from the 1760s onwards, offer a contrast of ornamental grounds, peaceful woodlands, meandering waterways and trimmed lawns.

Look out for the bust of Ossian, Lady Alice's Temple, Quaker Burial Ground and The Ice House.

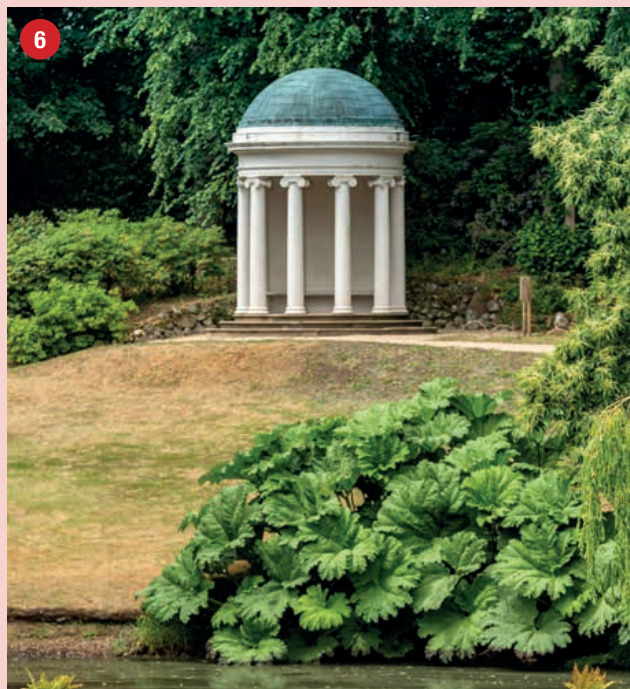

A ticket to Hillsborough Castle includes unguided access to the gardens.

Please visit <http://www.hrp.org.uk/hillsborough-castle> for tour times and further information.

It is advisable to book Castle tour tickets in advance as times vary seasonally and there are a limited number of spaces available each day.

HILLSBOROUGH FOREST & FORT

Built on the site of the old Magennes Stronghold, the Fort was founded in 1630 by Peter Hill and completed in 1650 by Colonel Arthur Hill. The original military aspect of the Fort was transformed in the mid-18th century, in accordance with Georgian taste, to a picturesque gothic style. King Charles II made this a royal fortress and Sir Arthur Hill was hereditary constable of a garrison of twenty warders.

The Fort commanded the strategic pass of Kilwarlin and was used in 1690 by William, Prince of Orange, on his way to the Battle of the Boyne. The gatehouse is an impressive rectangular two-storey building with brick dressings, battlements and tall, square-corner towers. The Fort was given to the state by the Downshire Family (the Hill family later became the Downshires) in 1959.

From the Fort, a tree-lined path with a set of late 18th century wrought iron gates leads up to The Square with its collection of Georgian town houses. Entering Hillsborough Forest, you will have an opportunity to relax in tranquil and unspoilt surroundings. This is an ideal location for a picnic or to spend a day angling in the lake (permit required and restrictions apply). The lake is a haven for swans and wildfowl and attracts ornithologists throughout the year.

ST MALACHY'S PARISH CHURCH

Superbly sited on a hillside off the Main Street and near Hillsborough Fort, the Parish Church is approached along an avenue of lime trees. Close to the Church, leading to the churchyard is a pinnacle gateway that may be a fragment of the earlier church. Externally, the notable feature of the Church is its three-storey tower, capped by pinnacles set at the corners and rising from the centre is a soaring spire.

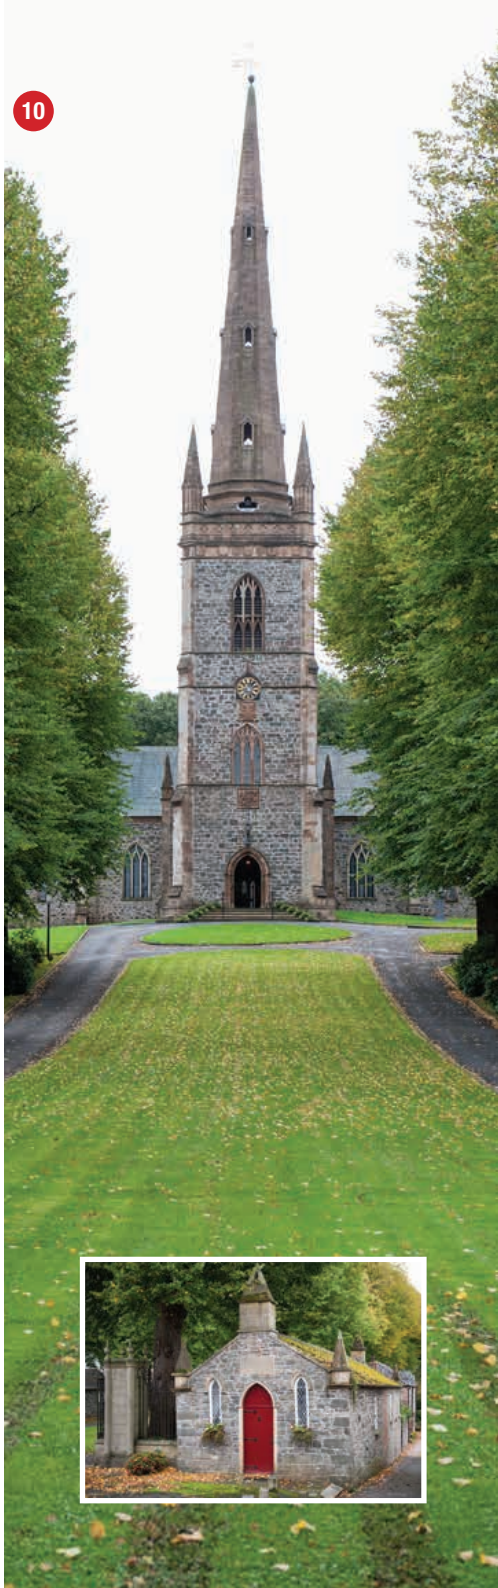

The Church today is in all respects the same as it was when Wills Hill completed the work of enlargement and restoration in 1772. Wills Hill, who became the First Marquis of Downshire in 1789, had hoped his church would be accorded cathedral status. It is still described as one of the best examples of an 18th century church in Ireland and is widely regarded as one of the finest examples of gothic revival architecture.

Internally the high quality of the woodwork is of particular interest; high plain oak pews, a tall octagonal pulpit with sounding board and bishop's throne. The gallery has a handsome double bow and is carried on clustered oak columns. The Church underwent major restoration between 1951 and 1956 and is now in excellent structural and decorative order.

In the porch of the Church is an unsigned bust of the First Marquis of Downshire. Visitors can stop and listen to the church bells ringing out across the village during the day. In August 2008 a new weathervane was erected in memory of the Eighth Marquis of Downshire, Arthur Robin Ian Hill (1929-2003).

Close to the Church is a bird bath which marks the resting place of the conductor and composer Sir Hamilton Harty (1879-1941). It is the work of the late sculptor Rosamund Praeger.

PLACES OF INTEREST

Park Street contains several fascinating buildings. Roden House (4 on map) which was built by the Downshire family was the childhood home of Arthur Stanley Boyd MD FRCCP (1920-1971).

A memorial garden at the bottom of Main Street was built in his honour expressing the gratitude of his patients and friends for his professional skills and unremitting devotion in his life of service to the community.

Next door the recently restored Quaker Meeting House which dates from 1836. The building is now available to local groups for meetings. Just opposite is Downshire Tennis Club. The lawn tennis club was established in 1939, however prior to this tennis was played at two locations on Ballynahinch Street (where the Health Centre is now located) and at the Pleasure Grounds (located originally at the end of Arthur Street). With the help of lottery grants in 1998 and 2003, and a hard-working committee, the club won 'The Supreme Club in Ireland in 2004'.

The Shambles (5 on map) on the Dromore Road is a grassy square, part enclosed with fleur-de-lys railings with an attractive L-shaped range of buildings, formerly used as a meat market/slaughterhouse.

Also located on the Dromore Road is the old rectory. Originally it was a finely proportioned grand three-storey house which was later enlarged and became Beechlawn School (3 on map) in 1956.

Arthur Street is an attractive cul-de-sac of terraced workers' cottages dating from 1850. The single storey buildings are of blackstone with brick trim and sandstone mouldings in the Tudor style.

A blue plaque (15 on map) marks the childhood home of Sir Hamilton Harty, musician and conductor, in Ballynahinch Street. The Downshire family provided the house as a residence for the parish organist, a position held by Harty's father William for forty years.

At the end of Ballynahinch Street is Downshire Primary School & Nursery (17 on map) and within the grounds is Hillsborough Village Centre (18 on map). Since being officially opened by Her Majesty the Queen in December 2005, Hillsborough Village Centre has become a hub of activity and a community focal point, facilitating people of all ages, abilities and backgrounds. The Centre provides access to casual sports, corporate facilities and special events. There is also an art gallery wall which displays local art exhibitions all year round. The whole complex is a not-for-profit charity community venture. Income generated over and above running costs is re-invested to maintain and improve the facilities and equipment.

The Presbyterian Church (16 on map) in Lisburn Street was originally built in 1833 and rebuilt in 1885.

Wander down Main Street, where in the summer you can admire its colourful floral displays and hanging baskets. Hillsborough village has received many accolades, including Best Kept Large Village in Ulster and Britain in Bloom.

Look out for one of the very few surviving early milestones (12 on map) in the Province. The milestone, which is cast iron set in granite, bears the following inscription: 'Dublin 70, Dromore 4, Lisburn 3' (in Old Irish miles) and is located halfway down the street.

Hillsborough War Memorial is outside the Parish Church, Main Street (13 on map). This beautiful Celtic cross was erected to perpetuate the names for all time of the men from Hillsborough and district who fought and fell in the Great War. The cross is worked in Irish limestone. The base weighs about four tonnes and has four raised panels, which contain the names of the men who made the supreme sacrifice. It is surmounted by a cross about 12 feet (4m) high, with arms 5 feet (1.75m) wide.

At the end of Main Street stands a statue of the Fourth Marquis, Arthur Hill, (14 on map) popularly known as 'The Big Marquis' (1812-1868). His friends and tenants erected the statue in 1873 which was sculpted by Samuel Ferres Lynn.

HILLSBOROUGH'S FAMOUS SONS

Harry Ferguson (1884-1960)

The world famous engineering genius was born at Growell, which is located close to Annahilt village. The 'Ferguson system' where the tractor and implement formed a single hydraulically controlled unit (3 point linkage system), revolutionised farming production and continues today as a key principle of tractor design. He is best remembered for his TE 20 'wee grey Fergie' tractor.

An interest in engines and their performance led him to design and build his own aeroplane. On 31 December 1909 in Large Park, Hillsborough, he also flew this for the first time being the first Irishman to do so. A replica plane sculpture on the A1 dual carriageway, just outside the village, was commissioned to recognise Harry Ferguson's achievement as a local pioneer and aviator.

His last years were spent at the design table, developing and improving several car safety features including his four-wheel drive system, which was first employed in Formula One racing cars. These features eventually filtered down into use in the modern day family car.

There is a bronze memorial plaque in Hillsborough Forest and a full-sized bronze statue and memorial garden at his birthplace.

Hamilton Harty (1879-1941)

This world famous composer, conductor and accompanist was born in the village of Hillsborough, a blue plaque marks his childhood home on Ballynahinch Street.

His father William Harty was the organist for 40 years in St Malachy's Church. From the age of ten he acted as an assistant organist for his father. The Snetzler organ, on which they played, can be seen in the west gallery of the parish church. Hamilton Harty is recognised as the foremost accompanist of his day; he was also a conductor for the London Symphony Orchestra and in 1920 was appointed permanent conductor of the Hallé Orchestra.

In 1925 he received the honour of Knighthood, and in 1934 he was awarded the Gold Medal of the Royal Philharmonic Society. His ashes are buried near the west doorway of the parish church marked by a bird bath (pictured above) carved in Limerick limestone.

Professor Frank Pantridge (1916-2004)

His invention of the portable defibrillator in 1965 has helped save countless lives throughout the world.

He was born near Hillsborough village on the 3 October 1916, graduated in medicine from Queen's University in 1939, and received a CBE in 1978. He went on to write 'The Acute Coronary Attack' in 1975 and in 1989 his autobiography was published.

Today there is a life-sized bronze sculpture in front of the Island Civic Centre in Lisburn City Centre to commemorate his life and work.
